Max McCalman is a dedicated scholar of cheese who acts as a consultant to the trade, often judges at cheese competitions and is a frequent guest lecturer. He was America's first restaurant-based Maître Fromager. Max's work takes him across North America and Europe, speaking at conferences and festivals, and most passionately, to explore the dairies and farms that contribute to artisanal cheese making. He is the Dean of Curriculum, Maître Fromager and Director of Affinage at the Artisanal Premium Cheese (APC) Center in New York City.
